Another Source Named Innovative Business of the Year in the Small Business Category By The Better Business Bureau

Seattle, WA – February 16, 2006 –The Better Business Bureau (BBB) named Another Source as Innovative Business of the Year winner in the Small Business Practices category.

Another Source is an employment referral service that developed a proprietary operating system, PeopleMatch Profiler that reduces the time, cost, and risk in recruiting. Fifteen years ago, the company's founder, Jan Scott, created a business model after years in the human resources arena. Scott knew there was a better way to provide value, efficiency, and human touch to the hiring process.

"This award is meaningful to all of us at Another Source because our systems have enabled us to jump-start the hiring process, and better the lives of everyone we come in contact with," said Jan Scott, president. "It recognizes not only the unique service we provide but our success in the marketplace and our impact in this industry. It's a solid affirmation that we are moving in the right direction."

Another Source received the Business of the Year award among 40 finalists in the Puget Sound area. The honor was presented at a ceremony held Feb. 10 at the Westin Hotel, Seattle.

"We were delighted to present Another Source with the 2006 Innovative Business Practices Award," said Robert W.G. Andrew, CEO and president of the Better Business Bureau. "Their business outlook towards customers, employees and their community should serve as a model for other businesses aspiring to the same level of excellence."

PeopleMatch Profiler is a three-week personalized recruiting alternative aimed at expediting the employment process. Referral Specialists work in partnership with HR departments to reduce the cost per hire and increase the effectiveness of staffing functions. Another Source bridges the gap between job boards and employment agencies.
