Another Source's Founder Retires, Ushers in New President

SEATTLE, Wash. (Feb 2, 2007) – Seattle-based employment referral service company, Another Source, announces that Marcie Glenn will serve as president and CEO of the firm. She took the helm on January 1, 2007. Glenn transitions from serving as Another Source's vice president of operations and marketing communications manager. She fills the role left by Jan Scott, Another Source's founder and president since 1991. Scott retired at the end of 2006. "I was responsible for giving Another Source its feet," said Scott. "Marcie will give it the legs to run to new heights. We have created a dynamic company over the past 15 years and Marcie will do amazing things." Glenn says her first months in her position will be busy ones. "We've got a lot on our plate in the short term. We have some ambitious business goals and community projects in the works." Scott started the company in 1991 to make the hiring process more efficient for employers and employees alike. Another Source is the only company in this area—and to the best of Scott's knowledge, the nation—to use a subscription model for access to a customized search and referral system of profiled candidates to hiring clients. Glenn earned her bachelor of arts degree in accounting from Seattle University. She serves as program chair of Northwest Recruiters Association. Glenn is an active volunteer with the Girls First Program at YWCA and participates as a member of Vistage International. Another Source volunteers on the Highline Community College Office Occupations Committee.
